F. C. JENSEN TALKS OF WOOL SITUATION

city, a guest of the Cullen. Speaking of sheep-raising and the wool industry of Utah. Mr Jensen's veln was that of the Utah. Mr. Jensen's veln was that of the unqualified optimist. Mr. Jensen, aside from his various financial enterprises in which he is engaged, is a prominent sheep-raiser, and one of the largest wool contractors in the state.

With the exception of a few districts in eastern Utah, Mr. Jensen says that sheep have generally wintered well, and that the wool clip will be fully up to the average. Virtually all of the wool from Modena, Utah, to Idaho has been sold under contract at prices ranging from 15 to 17 cents per pound. The wool market, Mr. Jensen says, is solid, and the proposed revision of the tariff, as scheduled by the Payne bill, will in no wise affect the future of the wool industry of the west.

Mr. Jensen is emphatic in his declaration that the inability of the late legislature, by passage of impracticable measures to paralyze state progress and Sait Lake City's upbuilding, thanks to executive interposition, insures at least two years of prosperity in this commonwealth.
